Ward candidates face off on issues

By KATIE WOODS

The BG News

Election day is only a day away. Here is one final glimpse of Bowling Green's 1st Ward candidates, the positions they stand for and what they plan on doing for the 1st Ward if elected.

Greg Amend, a first year student here at the University, is the Republican candidate in this election. Amend is a lifelong resident of Bowling Green. He feels that he is qualified for city council because not only will he be representing students, but also permanent residents.

"I can represent both groups fully because I have been both," he said.

Amend originally considered running when his mother, who works in the president's office, got a call that the Republicans were looking for a 1st Ward student candidate to run in the next election. Amend was always interested in politics and elections. The Republican Party liked the idea of backing not only a student, but a lifelong Bowling Green resident. Amend then became the Republican candidate.

Sarah Tomashefski, the Democratic candidate, made the personal choice to run early last semester because she wanted to be a voice for the students. Tomashefski, a third year student, was impressed with Bowling Green's community when she first moved here. Since then she has gotten involved in various ways. When Julie Meyer, the former 1st Ward member, resigned earlier this year, Tomashefski was appointed to finish out her term.

Although both candidates plan to represent the residents of the 1st Ward, they both have their own plans on making the community better if elected.

Amend plans to focus on campus and community.

"It needs to be better. They need to work together and not act like two separate entities," he said.

Amend suggests doing this by proposing a roundtable between campus and city administrators. His proposed roundtable would be open to anyone. He also wants to extend the off-campus bus route so that it has a stop downtown. Amend believes this shuttle service would cut down on the littering and vandalism that takes place throughout the 1st ward.

If Tomashefski wins the election she plans on continuing her work in making sure all the street lights are working and that the sidewalk are fixed. She also wants to work on making negligent landlords responsible.

"Smoke detectors are already mandatory by law, why not carbon monoxide detectors too," she said.

Amend's idea on solving the problems of negligent landlords is to use the media as a tool. He believes that students would be concerned if they knew it was a problem.

Both candidates feel the same way about the recent feelings that the Bowling Green police are abusing their power. They are quick to point out that the force this year is young, and are often stricter in an attempt to establish their authority amongst people not much older than themselves. However, they both say that an abuse of power should not be tolerated.

Muncie suffers loss after 6 shot during Halloween festivities

By RICK CALLAHAN

Associated Press Writer

MUNCIE, Ind. — A group of men who were turned away from a college Halloween party early Sunday opened fire on the small house, killing one man and wounding five others.

About 100 people had packed into the home after a Ball State University fraternity party. About 4 a.m., a car pulled into an alley behind the house and began firing into the home, said Marlon Glass, 31, who was at the party.

The house, in a student neighborhood near campus, was riddled with bullet holes, and a trail of shell casings still led from the back door to the alley Sunday afternoon. The windows of some of the half-dozen cars parked behind the house had been shot out.

Police and witnesses said at least two people had fired as many as 40 rounds from outside, and investigators were looking in to whether shots were fired inside the house as well.

Julian Brown, 28, a former Ball State student from Gary, Ind., was found dead in the kitchen, Muncie police Chief Joe Winkle said.

Two people were in fair condition Sunday at Ball Memorial Hospital and two were treated and released, a hospital spokesman said. One person was treated at the scene.

"It was a private gathering. It wasn't a wild party or anything like that. It just got out of hand," said David Keels, an advisor for Kappa Alpha Psi fraternity. A Kappa Alpha Psi member who lived in the house had invited several people over after the fraternity party at the local YMCA, Keels said.

The shooters' identities still hadn't been determined Sunday afternoon, Winkle said.

3 cars involved in crash over weekend, caused property damage

BG News Photos/BEN FRENCH

At 2:30 a.m. Friday, an auto accident occurred near 110 N. Prospect involving three automobiles, including one that was parked. The accident caused damage to parking meters and one of the vehicles ended up on the porch of a house owned by Bowling Green resident, Elenor McKee. The Bowling Green Police Department said that people were injured in the accident, however no names were released at press time.

MILLENNIUM MONDAY

Computers impact print media

There are 60 days left in the millennium and in order to celebrate, reflect and prepare for the 21st century, The News will run a millennium-related story every Monday.

By CRAIG GIFFORD

The BG News

Throughout time, the mass media has evolved from a little town newspaper, into what it is today: a mix of television conglomerates, major market newspapers and the radio. As we look back at what the media has become, we also look ahead at what is in store for the future and into the next millennium.

"It's impossible to say for sure, but it [the media] is going to change," said Dennis Hale, a professor of journalism at the University.

It is believed that there may be major changes in the media, especially in technology, as the Internet continues to expand.

"There will be a shift to the Internet, and in the future we may even see newspapers disappear, and become computerized," Hale said.

Linda Glomski, coordinator of the Great Lakes Inter-scholastic Press Association (GLIPA), shares similar thoughts, only that the switch to the Internet will be a more lengthy process.

"It will evolve over time just as the televisions did," Glomski said. "Just as every home now has a television, some day they will all have and may be dependent upon computers."

According to Hale, one good thing about the possibility of news becoming more computerized and technologically sound, is that the cost of putting out the news will go down.

"The biggest cost for papers is the print," Hale said. "We won't see books, magazines and newspapers disappear, they will just become more electronic, and as this happens, the cost of mass productions will go down."

Glomski believes the computerization of printed material will only grow as long as technology becomes more affordable and accessible to home owners.

"If the technology gets cheaper, we will see it have more of an impact, but if it stays expensive, then it will not," Glomski said.

As for students majoring in journalism, Hale said that they

U.S. becoming nation of fat

I'm going to take on fat people today. And I could really see this being misunderstood by a lot of people. So before I start in on this topic, I want to make a disclaimer.

Many people think that I write with the intent to insult and upset others. That's not entirely the case. I write recognizing that what I'm saying may insult and upset others. Sometimes maybe I do write explicitly to offend. But this is not one of those cases. I realize some people will still be offended. But at least know that it's not my intention for you to be so.

Okay, with all of that said, let me take on the heavy issue of weight.

I actually wrote this column a few weeks ago, but then discarded it because I felt it was just too mean and might be misunderstood. Then last Wednesday, there was an article in USA Today that affirmed my belief.

Approximately 55 percent of Americans are overweight. That's a majority for those of you who flunked algebra. And a study reported in the Journal of the American Medical Association stated that about 18 percent of all Americans are obese (12 percent of people aged 18-29 are obese).

Now that's bad, man. More than half of our country is made up of fat asses.

But, but, but ... let me redeem myself quickly here. I, technically, am a fat ass also. And I'll willingly admit it.

First of all, how does one calculate whether one is obese, overweight or in the normal range? It involves some complicated math, but I'll explain anyway.

Take your weight in kilograms (1 kilogram = 2.2 pounds, so a 220 pound person would weigh 110 kilograms). Then calculate your height in meters (1 inch = .0254 meters, so a 5'10" person is 70 inches tall and 1.778 meters tall). Square your height in meters. Now divide your weight in kilograms by your squared height in meters and this is what is called a Body Mass Index (BMI). If you're between 26 and 27.9, you're overweight. If you're above 27.9, you're obese. Some experts set it at 30 and above (that's where the limit was set for the study that found 18 percent of people being obese).

Now some people would be considered overweight by BMI, but may just be really muscular. That's why body fat percentage is another good tool to use to measure how overweight a person is. I still claim a lot of my weight comes from my shapely and large ghetto booty. So there are exceptions.

My BMI is something between 26 and 27 (depending on my height, which can actually make a big difference in your BMI). I'm not happy with that, though, and am trying to get back in shape by going to the rec and running and lifting weights. I'm not all too comfortable being overweight, putting myself in danger of cardiovascular diseases down the road.

It's important to me that I note that I'm totally grossed out by anorexics and Ally McBeal types. So it's not that I push for some ultra thin society. I'd prefer a person to be overweight than underweight. And I do understand that genetically, some people just have the cards stacked against them.

But I don't think any of this should make being fat inherently acceptable. I think it's like smoking or alcoholism. Some people are predisposed toward alcohol, but it can kill you down the road and we're not accepting of it as a society. We discourage alcoholics from drinking. We shun smokers from a whole hell of a lot of locations.

I'm not saying we should never allow overweight people to eat again or force them out of restaurants. I may be insensitive, but I'm not cruel. But I don't feel a deep pity or empathy for overweight people (myself included).

My main rationale for this opinion is that excess weight is generally (the important word being "generally") a good indicator of an unhealthy lifestyle. And I am fairly glad to be living and would prefer to see my life extended as long as possible at a certain level of comfort. And being overweight can inhibit that. But if a person is 20 pounds overweight, works out regularly, can run a couple miles and has low cholesterol and everything, the actual weight itself isn't an issue.

It doesn't mean I dislike fat people. Far from it. Self-hate isn't good. I just as much dislike smokers and alcoholics. But I do disagree with the unhealthy lifestyle those people are living and I don't feel guilty for that disagreement.

Brian Taylor is a columnist for The News. He has been jogging and can now flee very quickly. He does hope, though, that no one has been deeply offended by this column. He can be reached at taylob@bgnet.bgsu.edu.

Getting University education takes work

I am writing in regards to the frustration that Ginalynn Clausen is experiencing from this University. I used to be frustrated until I realized that anybody who thinks the University is still here solely for the education of the student is deluded. While it is possible to learn and be challenged at a University, it is an exception rather than a rule.

College is no longer a place where one goes to be educated, but rather, it is a social rite of sorts. Most parents who have enough money (and many who don't) send their kids to college so that they can "get a job" and generally be accepted as somebody who is "educated." They know that the kids don't really want to search for knowledge at the University, but the lack of a proper apprenticeship track leaves them with a choice between university and fast food. This equates to a choice between remaining part of their present social class or being cast out.

Most of these people are the same who say one of their reasons for going to college is to have the "college experience." Because the vast majority of people are in college for the "college experience" (drinking, finally having no parents around, thinking they are special because they get a piercing or a tattoo, joining a frat/sorority, etc.), the vast majority of money comes from them. In return, the University, thankful for their money, caters to them (not to you, Ginalynn).

The fact is, the majority of people are happy if a teacher isn't there, and they wouldn't know the difference between a movie from 30 years ago and the most cutting edge research if it weren't for the fact that one is on film and the other on video cassette. They would rather cram for a test and forget everything after the test than have to apply their knowledge to future situations (which explains why you, Ginalynn, are most likely told that you "think too much" by many of your acquaintances).

My advice to Ginalynn is to accept this (the only other alternative being to pay more than the masses pay collectively, in order to shift the University's attention towards you). Read books, take honors courses, and discuss your subjects with profs OUTSIDE of class. Most really want to teach you, but have become disheartened by the average student. Talking to them outside of class both shows them your interest and stops the rest of the class from getting angry at you for "kissing up" (a.k.a. trying to learn more than required).

U. needs to recognize duty it has to students

This is in response to the lack of information printed/action taken regarding the "hate incident" at the vision dance. The News and the administrators of this university have responsibilities to the community at BGSU.

THE NEWS: The News is the primary information source for students on this campus, and this makes it your duty to do just that. It is your job to inform the students of this university - especially of potential danger lurking about/around our campus!

THE ADMINISTRATORS: The #1 responsibility of the administrators to students is to provide an environment conducive to learning. This includes insuring the safety of all BGSU students while on this campus. It is also your responsibility to reprimand students that intimidate, harass or harm other students at this university. This campus is not general society. You, as administrators, have more control over what takes place on our campus, and the people you allow to take part in our community. If you can suspend a student for cheating on an exam, you most certainly have the power to suspend those students that violently harass members of our student body. This is your job and I expect to see you take action on this matter.

Boycott women's mags; read others

I am writing in response to Sarah Delaney's recent article "Women's mags need more" (Oct. 27). Congratulations to Sarah for addressing a problem that most of us already know exists, yet too few of us are actually trying to do anything about. The fact is, in addition to being harmful to the self-image of their readers, women's magazines are insultingly superficial, and in most cases, pathetically redundant (come on, how many times can a magazine get away with recycling the exact same article about how to have a better orgasm, or lose 10 pounds in a month, before women finally get so bored they stop reading?). I agree with most of Sarah's article; however, I would like to take her argument a step further.

First of all, Sarah said, "What if there was a magazine with feminist ideas for the women who don't necessarily call themselves feminists?" As a reminder, a feminist is anyone who believes in the social, political, and economic equality of the sexes. Period. Whether you are a man or a woman, a conservative or a liberal, a leader or a follower, if you believe men and women are equal, then you are a feminist. We should ALL consider ourselves feminists. Surprise, surprise. Very few feminists are actually radicals or manhaters. And keep in mind that there are radicals in every group, from Christians to Greek organizations to educators.

Secondly, it's a nice idea to write angry letters to the editors of women's magazines, but frankly, as long as millions of women continue to buy the magazines just as they are, not one word or image will ever change.

The best thing we can do is to simply stop purchasing them. The dollar is tremendously powerful. Stop letting Glamour/Elle/Vogue/Cosmo/Redbook/Mademoiselle make money off you. Start buying magazines that interest you as an INDIVIDUAL, and not as a "WOMAN." Do we really believe that all women are the same? Think about it, the very concept of a "women's magazine" is ridiculous! How could one magazine possibly satisfy all women? Start subscribing to magazines about music, politics, rock climbing, writing, or whatever it is that really gets you going. And I hate to say this, but if you can't think of a more specialized subject that would interest you, then you have some serious problems to take care of, and I'm not talking about getting rid of cellulite.

Letters to the Editor Policy

Do you agree with all of this? We doubt it. Write us and let us know where you stand.

■ Letters to the Editor. Letters are to be less than 500 words (less than two typed, double-spaced pages). These are usually in response to a current issue on the BGSU campus or Bowling Green area.

■ Guest Columns. Longer pieces (between 600-800 words) can be submitted as Guest Columns. Guest columns will be subject to space limitations and considered based on topic relevance and quality.

To submit a Guest Column or Letter, bring a copy on a labeled disk (Microsoft Word, Mac compatible) to 210 West Hall and leave it in the Opinion Editor's mailbox. Or, send it on e-mail to taylob@bgnet.bgsu.edu and give it the subject, "Letter to the Editor".

Today's Birthday (Nov. 11). You may want to resist authority figures this year, but you'd be smarter if you learn from one. Rumors could lead to big changes in December.

In January, you're the teacher and the student, too. In February, keep the most important stuff and toss the rest. There's too much work in April, and an old friend comes through for you in May. In August, stop competing with a strong person and become much stronger yourself. Save September for love.

To get the advantage, check the day's rating: 10 is the easiest day, 0 the most challenging.

Aries (March 21-April 19) — Today is a 7 — Abandon the thought of playing hooky today. Instead, strive for perfection in everything you do. You probably won't achieve it, but that's OK. The practice will be time well spent.

Taurus (April 20-May 20) — Today is a 7 — Be patient, as well as practical. Somebody's willing to argue with everything that you say even though you're right. Money may be the root of all evil, or it may not. Today, it does seem to be the cause of a lot of confusion.

Gemini (May 21-June 21) — Today is a 6 — You're learning something that will be useful later. What you're studying and what you're doing to pay the rent are most likely quite different, however. Is it time for a career change? Do what you love, and the money will follow — eventually.

Cancer (June 22-July 22) — Today is a 7 — You may be slightly stressed about your financial situation. You'd like to get something for somebody you love. It would be a thoughtful and well-appreciated gesture. Keep searching for a fire sale — but it's not fair if you light the match.

Leo (July 23-Aug. 22) — Today is a 7 — You're cute, but you have to work hard anyway. People who won't let you have what you want are out there. No point in throwing a tantrum. Instead, think about what you want to say before you go public with an important announcement.

Virgo (Aug. 23-Sept. 22) —

Today is a 7 — You'll have to hustle to keep up. The deadline's looming, and you might not even know what you're doing yet. You went for the challenge, and now you have to produce the results. Get an older person, a dear friend, to give you a boost.

Libra (Sept. 23-Oct. 23) — Today is a 7 — A difficulty will arise today, a little snag in the nylons of life. Somebody, perhaps who you've been dating, could bail you out of this predicament. Don't trade love for money, though. That could cause all sorts of new problems!

Scorpio (Oct. 24-Nov. 21) — Today is an 8 — You may feel like somebody is cramping your style. Think about it honestly, though. Is it the other person's fault, or are you refusing to do what this person wants? That's your choice, of course, and it might be smart. If so, be proud of your decision.

Sagittarius (Nov. 22-Dec. 21) — Today is a 6 — You can't get where you want to go. Slog through your chores and stop complaining. Stop daydreaming, too. Pretending you're there isn't going to make it happen sooner. Just the opposite's more likely the case.

Capricorn (Dec. 22-Jan. 19) — Today is a 7 — How can you take care of your own needs and another person's, too, when they're contradictory? Should you pretend that you don't care? That's not a good idea. Why not stall, instead? Maybe something will happen that takes the heat off you — soon.

Aquarius (Jan. 20-Feb. 18) — Today is a 5 — Compromise with your partner. The two of you have most likely had this same disagreement before. At least you know what to expect. Then, wait for a shift in the other side's position. If you and your mate work together, you could win.

Pisces (Feb. 19-March 20) — Today is a 7 — You're most likely swamped with work. You'd rather be out somewhere, pondering the meaning of the universe. Forget that, for now. You could get into serious trouble if you don't pay attention. This is actually what the universe is trying to teach you, so get it!

Relatives grieve over plane crash victims

By DONNA ABU-NASR
Associated Press Writer

CAIRO, Egypt — In one corner of the makeshift information center, a man collapsed into a chair, wailing, "My son, my son."

The scene was replayed over and over Sunday at Cairo International Airport, where friends and loved ones of the 214 people who disappeared that morning into the Atlantic waited for word. Some were too terrified to even check the manifest of EgyptAir Flight 990. Others demanding information that didn't yet exist.

"Please, I want to know if he's dead or still alive," begged Sobhi Mohammed, whose brother-in-law was on the plane. "If he's dead, then I know that it is the end of his life. But the officials tell me they don't know if he's dead or alive."

Doctors and nurses milled about at Terminal One, treating those who had fainted upon hearing the news that the plane had vanished off the coast of Massachusetts.

EgyptAir officials set up a table in a terminal restaurant with passenger and crew manifests and told waiting families that there could still be survivors from the crash, but many refused to entertain hope. Some collapsed. One man was given an injection. Others demanded proof.

"Maybe it's not him, maybe it's someone with a similar name," cried Samiha Ismail, who came to ask about her brother-in-law. When she heard that his name was on the list, she collapsed, wailing. "My dear brother, my dear sister. I can't believe this."

On board were 62 Egyptians — including 15 crewmembers — two Sudanese, three Syrians and could have been on the plane, but he didn't want to check the yelling profanities in Arabic about EgyptAir. "I want to see it with my own eyes," he shouted, referring to the passenger manifest.

Nearby another man collapsed and was given an injection.

The man staring out the window had collapsed upon finding a familiar name on the list. "My son, my son," he cried.

Suhair Hathout was subdued amid the shouting and wailing. She was expecting her sister and brother-in-law, who live in Ohio. "I just came here to collect them. Now it looks like I'm going to arrange for a funeral," she said.

Red-eyed airline stewards waited for news about their colleagues. Many were grasping at any sign of hope, including an early rumor started by the airport office of EgyptAir that the plane had made an unscheduled landing in London.

Russian airstrike in Chechnya kills at least 25 people

By RUSLAN MUSAYEV
Associated Press Writer

GROZNY, Russia — A Russian airstrike on a convoy of civilians fleeing Chechnya killed at least 25 people, including two Red Cross workers, the Red Cross reported Saturday.

The report came as Russian jets and artillery continued to pound the breakaway republic on Saturday in an attempt to root out Islamic militants.

Russian forces shelled the capital, Grozny, from hills 6 miles northwest of the city, concentrating their fire on suspected guerrilla positions in the northern and southern outskirts. In the east, they were closing in on Gudermes, Chechnya's second largest city. They also shelled the mountains near the western guerrilla stronghold of Bamut.

The Red Cross said in a statement that Russian rockets on Friday hit a five-vehicle convoy near Shami-Yurt, about 12 miles west of Grozny. In addition to those killed, 70 were wounded, it said. The convoy included Red Cross vehicles, clearly marked on their roofs with the red cross emblem, the organization said.

Chechen officials had said about 50 civilians were killed in the attack.

The Russian air force denied that its planes had hit a refugee convoy.

Instead, it said the target of its attack was a rebel convoy, from which militants had fired unsuccessfully on a Russian Su-25 attack jet. Two trucks packed with militants were destroyed, the air force said.

Chechen authorities, meanwhile, struggled to find new routes to evacuate refugees from the battered republic in southern Russia. Civilians have been largely unable to flee Chechnya for a week, after the Russian army closed the border with the neighboring republic of Ingushetia. Some 173,000 people have taken refuge in Ingushetia since the Russian offensive began in September.

Russian fighter jets systematically bombed the main road leading south from the Chechen capital toward the mountains and neighboring Georgia, apparently trying to cut off an escape route for rebels. They destroyed a bridge spanning the Argun River near Chishki, about 30 kilometers south of Grozny.

The attacks on the southern highway would also stem a potential escape route for civilians. Georgia has previously kept its border with Chechnya closed, but it has promised to accept refugees and help accommodate them, and Chechen authorities are considering organizing refugee convoys out through the south.

U.S. and other Western officials have urged Moscow to end the fighting and negotiate with the Chechens. Russian officials have shrugged off the advice, determined to punish the Islamic militants, whom they regard as terrorists.

Chechen militants have repeatedly in 12 years authorities promised to reopen the crossing between Chechnya and Ingushetia on Sunday and to open a new crossing on Chechnya's border with Dagestan, to the east.

However, there was heavy fighting Saturday near the proposed Dagestani checkpoint in Gerzel.

Colombians horrified over mass child killings

By MARTIN HODGSON
Associated Press Writer

PEREIRA, Colombia — Twelve freshly planted palms stand as a memorial to the 25 children whose skeletal remains were found here last year, leading police to a man who may be one of history's worst serial killers.

Brightly-painted figures of children at play are carved into an overlooking hillside, and a sign at the bottom of the grassy gully reads: "If we continue with the indifference and the abandonment, we'll never know what happened to the children of Pereira."

The gruesome findings last

November in the ravine and a nearby overgrown city lot in Colombia's bustling western coffee belt sparked a public outcry that prompted a nationwide investigation into more than a hundred missing children over the past several years.

This week, the break came. A 42-year-old drifter confessed to killing 140 children during a five-year rampage, chief federal prosecutor Alfonso Gomez said.

Luis Alfredo Garavito, who was jailed on attempted rape charges in April, confessed to the killings after being presented with overwhelming evidence linking him to the attacks, the prosecutor said.

Luring his victims with a myriad of disguises — a cripple, a monk, a beggar, a priest, a charity worker — Garavito gained his victims' confidence by offering them soft drinks and money. In several of the 59 towns he drifted through, Garavito earned nicknames, including "El Loco" and "Goofy."

Most of his victims were boys from poor families between the ages of 8 and 16. Many had their throats slit, and some of their remains were found tied to trees with nylon rope. Others were buried in shallow graves. Gomez said Saturday that Garavito had raped some of the children.

'Run Lola Run' fast-paced excitement

By JAMES ELDRED
The BG News

The plot to new German film "Run Lola Run" is so simple it can be explained in one sentence. But the film is so dazzling and complex that this review probably won't be able to do it justice.

After an incredible opening credits sequence, the film begins with Lola on the phone, her boyfriend Manni lost 100,000 marks from a heist that he was supposed to give to his crime boss, if Lola can't come up with some money in 20 minutes, Manni will most likely be killed. Lola decides that the best place to get the money would be from her dad, a rich banker, so off she goes to find him.

What is odd about this film is that we don't just watch Lola's journey once, we watch it three separate times, each having a different outcome because of small changes that take place each time. In one journey she leaps over the dog in her stairwell, in the other she trips over it, and because of that one small event her run is much different than the one before it. It's a very abstract way to tell a story, and it works.

To match the abstract story is the very unusual directorial style. This film could best be described as an 80-minute music video. Tom Tykwer, the director and writer, uses fast cuts and non-stop action, giving the film a music video-like quality, which is aided by the fact that almost the entire film is set to a fast-paced techno soundtrack. Tykwer uses every directorial trick in the book to make every single shot stand-out from the previous one. Slow-motion, fast-motion, frame-by-frame shots, black and white still photography, split-screen views and even animation techniques are used to give the film an unforgettable feel.

Photo Provided

Another unusual technique used when we get to see just big the small differences are during each scenario are when the film looks into the future of the people that Lola interacts with. On her first journey, she slows down a man on a bike, because of that a group of thugs see him, beat him up and take his bike. He's then taken to the hospital, meets a nurse, falls in love and gets married. We see all of this in a lightening quick montage of still photos that lasts no more than 20 seconds. Then, the second time around, she doesn't slow him down, he never meets his future wife and he dies a bum.

Of course none of the fast-paced editing and exciting shots would matter if you didn't care about Lola, but you do. She goes through hell and back for her worthless boyfriend Manni, you can't help but feel for her. Also, Franka Potente (who is also a techno artist who co-composed the film with the director) is fantastic as Lola, which is good thing considering she's almost in every single shot of the film. The looks of utter desperation of her face when things go wrong, and complete and total joy when things go right, are priceless.

The film is circulating through the art cinemas right now and is gaining quite a large following. This film is odd, exciting and amazing at the same time; it is guaranteed cult status when it becomes available to everyone on video in a few months. It's hard to find right now, but it's worth the search. "Run Lola Run" is one of the most exciting and original films I have seen this decade.

Haunted Ohio shows state's ghostly history

By CHASTITY LESTER
The BG News

"I can't prove any of it, anyone could make just about any of this up" she said. But Chris Woodyard, author of the Haunted Ohio series, claims she has seen things that make the stories in her books real.

Woodyard has visited areas all around Ohio in search of ghostly presences. Among the ghost stories in her books, Woodyard has written on Amanda, the famous sorority ghost of Bowling Green and the ghosts of the Eva Marie Saint Theatre.

While attending BGSU for library sciences in 1971 through 1973 Woodyard often felt presences in spots in the library.

"There were spots that made me feel nervous. I didn't want to be in the library in certain areas" she said.

She also claims that the Columbian House, an inn and restaurant in Waterville, holds several spirits.

The upper women's restroom was a retention center for criminals in the 1800s. The spirit of an old man, who died in the cell after calling for help after his arrest for public drunkenness, haunts the bathroom, still calling for someone to come.

The spirit of a baby boy is seen still looking for his parents, both victims of cholera. He holds up his arms and wails for comfort.

This gift, which is passed through Woodyard's family has a downside. "All I want to do is bend down and pick this baby boy up, but I can't do it" said Woodyard, who is constantly in tune with her ability to see spirits.

Woodyard said she always knew she would be a writer. She came up with the idea for her books after asking a local librarian what type of books were needed. The librarian told her Ohio ghost legends because the books are the ones that are most often stolen from the library.

Woodyard, who had already considered the topic, saw this as an omen to begin her series.

She also said that "If the libraries had to keep buying the books to replace the ones that were stolen, then I could probably make some money since the library would have to keep buying new copies."

She currently has written four books titled Haunted Ohio and is currently on tour with Haunted Ohio IV. She has also written "The Wright Stuff, a guide to life in the Dayton Area" and "Spooky Ohio", a ghost book for children.

The books are published by Kestral Publishing, which is owned by Woodyard.

Woodyard also controls an on-line catalog, The Invisible Ink, which has over 550 books about ghosts and hauntings from authors around the world. You can buy her, or other authors' books at www.invink.com.

Last troop ship leaves Indonesia

By LAURA KING

Associated Press Writer

DILI, East Timor — Under cover of darkness, the last Indonesian troop ship sailed out of Dili's nearly deserted harbor early Sunday, ending a bloody 24-year military engagement in East Timor.

"They are all leaving tonight," Indonesian marine Capt. Raja, who used only one name, said shortly before the rusty gray vessel slipped clear of the harbor, lit only dimly with generator-powered lights on the crumbling dock.

The departure of the Indonesian troops closes a chapter of history that has left as many as 200,000 East Timorese dead since the Indonesian invasion of the former Portuguese colony on Dec. 7, 1975. About 5,000 Indonesian troops died.

Indonesia has effectively relinquished its claim to East Timor, which was left ravaged by a wave of violence surrounding its independence referendum on Aug. 30.

Only a small contingent of Australian peacekeepers watched the scene, casting off the heavy ropes mooring the ship. A voice from the ship shouted, "Thank you, sir."

In the moments before the ship sailed at 12:55 a.m., Indonesian troops wearing heavy packs crammed themselves into the ship's already crowded hold.

The last few soldiers waded through a few feet of water to scramble aboard the tank-landing ship, the Kri Teluk Banten, as a loud speaker cried out: "The ramp is being raised."

Because the waterfront has been ruined, the scene was enveloped in almost complete darkness, save for the the generator-powered floodlights on the dock and spotlights shining from the ship.

As the ship left, two East Timorese on a motorcycle drove by, saying: "Thieves leaving in the night."

In an extraordinary farewell gesture, East Timor's rebel leader clasped hands with senior Indonesian military officers today as Indonesian forces spent their final hours in the territory they occupied for 24 years.

Guerrilla chieftain Jose Alexandre "Xanana" Gusmao and officers from the military his followers battled for years met and talked intently in a lounge at the Dili airfield, as the Indonesians were making their final preparations to leave.

An Indonesian cargo plane full of troops and equipment flew back to Jakarta, and a troop-transport ship was ready to set to sail from Dili's harbor.

The bearded, graying Gusmao, clad in neatly pressed combat fatigues, said the Indonesian departure marks the end of difficult era for both sides.

"It ends a historical error. A mistake between two countries," the 53-year-old guerrilla commander told reporters. "Now we have to look at the future."

The Indonesian garrison in the territory had dwindled to only a few hundred troops. On Friday night they lowered the flag at their main barracks in a quiet ceremony and pulled out of the capital's telecommunications center.

Peacekeeping troops sealed off the docks and kept a wary eye on a crowd of East Timorese who have been jeering and transition to independence for the territory, likely to take two or

Top humanitarian, peacekeeping and U.N. officials were at the dusty airport for what was more of a cordial chatting-and-mingling session than an actual ceremony with Indonesian commanders.

The spree of burning, looting and terror by anti-independence militiamen drove nearly three-quarters of the province's 850,000 people from their homes. About half of them are still displaced, and aid agencies have arrived in force to help feed and shelter them.

More than a quarter-million East Timorese wound up in refugee camps in neighboring West Timor, an Indonesian province, but hundreds are arriving home daily. The latest refugee ship docked this morning with nearly 1,900 East Timorese aboard, tying up only a few hundred yards from the last Indonesian ship waiting to sail for home.

Also, what is expected to be a twice-daily barge service has begun ferrying about 1,000 refugees a day from camps around Atambua in West Timor.

The departure of the Indonesian troops had been considered imminent since a United Nations transition team formally took control of East Timor earlier this week. The U.N. is to oversee the Although popular anger against the Indonesian military is high, the peacekeepers, the United Nations team and even the rebel army tried hard to give the departing troops a respectful send-off.

5 Israelis injured in shooting on bus in West Bank

By NASSER SHIYOUKHI

Associated Press Writer

TARKUMIYA, West Bank — Five Israelis were injured Saturday when assailants fired on a bus traveling through the West Bank. The attack, which police blamed on Palestinians, comes two days before a major peace summit.

Israeli, Palestinian and U.S. leaders meet in Oslo on Monday to open final status talks on the most thorny issues of the peace process.

Israeli opponents to Prime Minister Ehud Barak's efforts to revive the process will likely seize on the incident as proof of Palestinian leader Yasser Arafat's inability or unwillingness to control militant Palestinians.

The bus was traveling from the settlement of Kiryat Arba when assailants opened fire near the Palestinian village of Tarkumiya, police spokesman Rafi Yaffe said. Five Israelis were slightly to moderately wounded. He said police were operating on the assumption the assailants were Palestinian militants.

Settlers said that four young people were injured, one seriously. The wounded were evacuated to a hospital in Jerusalem, Yaffe said.

The area of the shooting is controlled by Israel, Israel radio reported.

The attack occurred near a "safe passage" for Palestinian travel between the West Bank and Gaza Strip, which opened last week.

Israeli hard-liners had warned that the route traveled by thousands of Palestinians would be used by terrorists to carry out attacks against Israelis.

Israeli troops began an extensive search for the assailants, but did not immediately arrest any suspects.

The Israelis on the bus, residents of the southern Israeli town of Kiryat Gat, had attended an event to show solidarity with the settlers.

Barak and Arafat are slated to officially open the final status talks in Oslo. President Clinton was to direct the ceremonies.

Barak took office in July and immediately renewed the peace process, which was largely frozen during the three-year rule of his predecessor, Benjamin Netanyahu.

Barak has demanded the Palestinians fight anti-Israeli groups, but has taken a more moderate stance toward the Palestinians than Netanyahu.

Proposed law will allow discrimination against gays

By GRETA HALE
The BG News

Vision is becoming more political and is concerned with several bills, including the Religious Liberty Protection Act, which the U.S. Senate will vote on in a few weeks.

The Religious Liberty Protection Act, if passed by the Senate and signed by President Clinton, would be a federal law allowing Americans, such as landlords, employers and business owners, to violate state and local discrimination law, claiming that following them would violate their religious freedom, according to a press release of the Gays and Lesbians United.

The main concern is that the bill would allow homosexuals to be discriminated against due to religious beliefs of individuals and businesses, according to Bruce Nolan of the New Orleans Times-Picayune.

Jessica Teaman, president of Vision, the gay/ lesbian/ bisexual/ transexual/ queer/ questioning/ straight supportive group on campus, is personally opposed to the bill.

"I believe in a very strong separation of church and state," Teaman said. "People's individual religions should not allow them to discriminate against other people in housing or jobs."

In speculating on the consequences of the RLPA if passed locally, Teaman believes there would be at least a slight increase in local discrimination.

"It is sort of hard to tell," Teaman said. "People do it already to a certain extent and they use other excuses. Just because people do it already, we shouldn't make it easier for them."

In addition to the RLPA, Vision is concerned with other political issues.

Vision's goal is to be a social and support staff, and also an educational environment, but is becoming more political, said Jason Patterson, the group's vice president.

"We have been trying to get a more political activist outlook lately from issues currently in the news," Teaman said.

The main political issues Vision is concerned with are legalizing gay marriages, allowing gays to adopt children and gay job discrimination.

According to Teaman, "those are the real life issues that will affect our members in the next ten years."

As far as Teaman's personal views, she believes that gays and lesbians have not been granted protection against discrimination because people do not consider them a valid minority.

"People think it is a choice, that it is a vice," Teaman said. "People think it amounts to doing drugs or drinking — that people do it for pleasure, that it is a perverted behavior, and that it has nothing to do with emotion or love."

She also said that gays and lesbians have not been granted protection against discrimination because people think it is a choice to choose to be gay or not. Although Teaman does not believe people choose to be gay, she said that it does not matter if it is a choice or not. She said that religion is also a choice, and that religions are given protection against discrimination.

In the past, Vision has been opposed to the Defense of Marriage Act, which is a federal law that would prohibit states from making gay marriages legal.

According to Teaman, Vision was also in favor of the Employment Non-Discrimination Act, which extends job discrimination to include sexual orientation. It recently failed.

According to Patterson, a focus of the organization has been the hate crimes bill, which just failed last week. The bill would have increased hate crimes to include crimes against people due to sexual orientation, which would expand on the existing definition that includes racial and ethnic groups.

Patterson said that as Vision is becoming more widely known, it is becoming more political.

need not worry too much about the changes that may occur in media.

"It's a frustrating time, you can't tell students that if they get a job with a certain industry that it will stay alive, however, even with the move towards more electronic news, the demand for people who are skilled at writing will be so great, that the market for people with traditional skills will go up, but they will have to be flexible and learn Internet and web skills," Hale said.

While electronic print is on the rise, the fall of print media is not too likely any time soon.

"The daily newspaper is still very viable, and while the Internet media is here to stay, it will not change things too drastically too quickly," Glomski said.

They recommend that if students have a problem with this they should immediately call the chief of police or their representative in council.

If elected Amend plans on working very closely with both on- and off-campus students to tackle the problems that they have.

Tomashefski thinks that the best way to represent students if she is elected is to make herself available for them to contact with their problems.

"I am always giving out my e-mail and phone number so that people will contact me with their concerns and ideas."

BG puts Nanooks on ice

Alaska-Fairbanks loses twice to icers

By MATTHEW P. LYONS
and DAN NIED
The BG News

The Bowling Green State University Falcons, who scored just nine goals in their first four regular season games, found an offensive spark that led to an 8-2 win over the University Alaska-Fairbanks in their home opener Friday and a 5-4 win on Saturday.

What's more, the Falcons knocked down a 5-10 brick wall in freshman Lance Mayes, peppering him with four goals on 21 shots. Nanooks coach Guy Gadowsky was forced to pull Mayes, who shut down No. 3 Michigan last week, late in the second period.

While the final score indicates it, the game started out as anything but a Bowling Green romp. A series of early penalties forced Bowling Green to live dangerously on the penalty kill for the first 10 minutes of the game.

"We still need to come out a little stronger," BG defenseman Doug Schueller said. "We need to come out buzzing, we have to learn to play 60 minutes.

Tonight we could have played those first 10 minutes stronger."

At 7:25 of the first period, the penalties came back to haunt the Falcons. Up two men, the Nanooks cracked the scoreboard first when Nathan Rocheleau slipped a Jim Lawrence centering pass past BG goalie Tyler Masters.

The Falcons managed to knot the game at one when Greg Day found an open net at 16:12 of the first.

In the second, Bowling Green stole all the thunder the Nanooks could wish for. Less than three minutes into the period, junior Ryan Murphy took advantage of a Craig Dejarlais rebound, skated around the top of the crease and found the net to the right of Mayes.

The game winner also came from the stick of Day, who, at 11:54 of the second, notched his second goal of the night.

"From our standpoint, I can't see any one area where we beat them," Gadowsky said of Bowling Green. "They beat us everywhere. There is not one area."

"I thought overall our team played well," he said. "The forwards are helping the defense out, our defense won the one on one battles in our end of the rink, and in turn we got some odd man rushes in transition."

Saturday, both teams saw the CCHA's new four-man officiating system for the first time (see related story).

Just as they did Friday, the Nanooks scored first on a 5 on 5 goal by Sjon Wynia at 10:37. Wynia was assisted by Grosul and Laurence. Also the same as

New system features fourth hockey official

By MATTHEW P. LYONS
The BG News

Both the BGSU and University of Alaska-Fairbanks hockey teams were exposed to the CCHA's new four-man officiating system Saturday.

This spring the CCHA administration received final authorization from the NCAA to go ahead with plans to institute the four-man officiating system. Officiating moved from the old system of one referee and two line judges, to two referees and two line judges. The CCHA brought in Sam Sisco, Director of Hockey Operations for the International Hockey League, to demonstrate the new system to the current officials at CCHA Officiating Training Camp.

Under the new system, referees are able to make calls over the whole ice. One referee, the "deep referee," is responsible for watching and making calls that concern the play itself. The other referee, the "back referee," will watch and make calls away from the play. Linesmen will not call penalties just as they were not permitted to under the old system.

Saturday's game was the first time the BG crowd got to see the new officiating set up as well. In Friday's game Fairbanks had nine penalties for 18 minutes, and the Falcons had seven penalties for 14 minutes. On Saturday Fairbanks had 23 penalties for 62 minutes and BG had 18 penalties for 52 minutes, a drastic increase from the previous night.

Despite the increase in penalties and his feelings on the change, Falcon coach Buddy Powers felt the officials were not a factor in the game.

"I'm kinda noncommittal on it," Powers said. "I'm of the opinion that it's not necessary. With the assistant-referee having the rights they have to make calls that our game is controlled well enough as it is. I don't think the referees had an impact on the game at all. I thought they did a good job."

The coach for Alaska Fairbanks declined to comment citing a lack of experience with the new system.

Hail Mary leads to Brown's first win

NEW ORLEANS — With time running out on what looked like their eighth straight loss, the Cleveland Browns were desperate. They were also armed.

The combination added up to the first victory for the first-year expansion team and a shocking sixth straight loss for the New Orleans Saints.

Tim Couch, who already had a pair of scoring passes, completed a desperation 56-yard touchdown to Kevin Johnson with no time on the clock Sunday for a 21-16 victory.

"I couldn't have thrown it another yard," Couch said. "I put everything I could into it and threw it as high as I could. It's a neat way to get your first one."

The entire Cleveland team raced on the field to celebrate the unlikely win, with Couch pumping both fists and slapping hands with fans. The dejected Saints (1-6) could only walk off the field after losing a fourth-quarter lead for the fifth time this season.

"There's no use sitting back thinking about how horrible things are," Saints running back Ricky Williams said. "You've got to try to bounce out."

The Browns (1-7) got a chance after New Orleans mismanaged the clock, calling a timeout with 29 seconds left rather than letting time run down. Doug Brien's 46-yard field goal with 21 seconds left put the Saints up 16-14.

But Couch, who completed 11 of 19 passes for 193 yards, drove the Browns 75 yards on three plays, hitting Johnson in the corner of the end zone despite a swarm of Saints defenders around him.

BG ends losing streak

By G. MICHAEL GRAHAM
The BG News

It's about time.

That was the prevailing thought Saturday as the Falcons dominated Central Michigan offensively and defensively. Most of the announced crowd of 8,573 at Perry Stadium finally saw the team it expected to see all year.

The Falcons offense put up 404 yards offensively and the defense limited the Chippewas to 291 in total offense en route to a 31-7 Mid-American Conference victory. Tailback Joe Alls paved the offensive attack (see sidebar).

The Falcons snapped a three-game losing streak and improved to 3-6 overall and 2-5 in the conference. CMU is 2-6 and 1-4.

"I felt the coaches prepared an outstanding game offensively and defensively," BG coach Gary Blackney said. "It looks good when it is executed. The players came out and executed today."

The Falcons scored on the opening drive when receiver Aaron Alexander hauled in a 31-yard fade pass from quarterback Andy Sahm on the right side of the end zone in the first quarter. The lead gave the Bowling Green defense confidence when it took the field and it responded well throughout the game.

Senior defensive end D.J. Durkin gave the defense a lift playing the entire game for the first time in a while.

"D.J. was back in full swing," Blackney said. "He's the heartbeat of that defense. Truthfully, we haven't been the same without him. Having him back after having two screws put in his ankle in less than three weeks in my opinion is phenomenal."

The game plan was to stop senior standout tailback Eric Flowers and freshman standout wide receiver Jamarl O'Neal. They knew the Chippewas had a young team offensively.

The defense accomplished the mission. The Falcon defense limited Flowers to 12 total yards on 10 carries. Every time he touched the ball, three Falcon defenders stopped him in his tracks.

"They controlled the line of scrimmage," Central coach Dick Flynn said. "That's evident in how we weren't able to run the football — a key part to our offense."

CMU had just 43 yards rushing. The longest Central run was 12 yards by Ira Gooch.

"If you can stop a team from rushing the ball and make it one-dimensional, that's easy to stop," Durkin said. "Coach [Tim] Beckman [BG's defensive coordinator] has been talking all year about getting 11 helmets to the ball. We were able to do that today. It was great to be out there with high-energy guys."

O'Neal had just three catches for 24 yards. Senior cornerback Will Sullivan was on him the whole game.

The Chippewas, forced to go to the air, were led by quarterback Pete Shepherd completed 26-of-43 yards. His longest play was the only Central score — a 40-yard touchdown pass to David Hannah. Due to the pressure up front, Shepherd threw most of his passes to the flats.

The Falcons went up 21-0 after fullback Brent Martin's 9-yard touchdown reception and an Alls 1-yard run. Following the Chippewa score, kicker Jason Strasser had a 26-yard field goal and tailback Godfrey Lewis had a 26-yard run.

After the Martin score, Sahm took a hit and had to sit for one series. He played the second half on a sprained ankle. Schneider, on the other hand, suffered a concussion while leading BG downfield and was taken the hospital at halftime. Blackney hadn't heard anything after the game.

Sullivan and linebacker Joe O'Neill led the Falcons with seven tackles each.

The Falcons don't play again until hosting Ball State Nov. 13.

Running game helps team win

By PETE STELLA
The BG News

Most football fans know that the running aspect of a team's offense is very important for a team to win.

The BG football team, who has struggled this season attempting to set up a strong, reliable running game, saw four of their strong running backs rush for a total of 230 yards on the day. The brown and orange were led by redshirt freshman Joe Alls, who tallied 134 yards on 29 carries and one touchdown. Alls also had one kick-off return for 40 yards. The Falcons are 2-0 this year when they have a back go over 100 yards on the day.

"I think there are two ingredients," BG coach Gary Blackney said. "Number one, Joe Alls runs with such authority and he is such an assertive runner and then he breaks a few tackles and the offensive line gets excited and they start blocking better."

"I have always felt Joe Alls was a great running back,"

Blackney added. "He is only a redshirt freshman and there is more to being a running back than just running the football. He had to grow into the role in the pass protection. He has evolved now where he has gotten better and much more knowledgeable about his assignments and his pickups in the overall protection schemes. He is an excellent athlete."

Alls had a strong supporting cast behind him in the rushing category. Sophomore tailback Godfrey Lewis rushed for 59 yards on eight carries and also scored on a 26 yard touchdown run with 10:56 left in the game. Fifth year senior fullback Brent Martin also carried the ball nine times and netted 31 yards. Martin also participated in the Falcon scoring when he caught a nine yard touchdown pass from redshirt freshman quarterback Andy Sahm.

Alls, who had only tallied 182 yards on the season so far, gave credit for his performance where credit was due.

"We just kept pounding it and pounding it and eventually, I broke a couple," Alls said. "The offensive line blocked great and they just gave me a little seam to run through and I just ran. The line blocked great and I have to give a lot of credit to them because without them, I couldn't run for five yards."

"I am not that big, I am not a 200 pound back, but I like to run like one," Alls added. "Cause a lot of defensive players think they can come up and hit me but I've got something for them."

Titans defeat Rams

By TERESA M. WALKER
AP Sports Writer
NASHVILLE, Tenn. — Quick starts had made the St. Louis Rams the NFL's last undefeated team. On Sunday, they couldn't get going fast enough.

Steve McNair, playing his first game in six weeks following back surgery, threw for two touchdowns and ran for another as the Tennessee Titans held on for a 24-21 victory over the Rams in the unlikely clash of this year's NFL powers.

The Titans (6-1) outscored the Rams (6-1) 21-0 in the first 14 minutes. But Kurt Warner, whose two fumbles led to two first-quarter touchdowns, rallied St. Louis by throwing three touchdown passes in the second half.

After Warner's 15-yard TD pass to Amp Lee with 2:14 left cut Tennessee's lead to 24-21, Lorenzo Styles of the Rams recovered the onside kick and gave Warner one more chance to prove the Rams could win late as well as early.

With no timeouts, Warner needed nine plays to get them to the Titans 19 with time running out.

St. Louis ran Jeff Wilkins out to try a 38-yard field goal, but his kick missed wide right with 7 seconds left. The Rams thought they would get one more chance thanks to a flag. But officials ruled that Titans linebacker Terry Killens had been blocked into Wilkins by Mike Gurttaduria.

Men's soccer wins in overtime

By DAVE TRUMAN
The BG News

Ypsilante, Mich. -- Bowling Green locked up the third seed in the Mid-American Conference tournament with a 3-2 overtime victory over Eastern Michigan, Sunday.

The Falcons tied the game on a Bobby Biggs goal from 20 yards out with just 2:35 remaining in regulation. Midfielder Chris Dore found Biggs open in front of the EMU box and was credited with his 23rd career assist, moving him into ninth place all-time among BG players.

The Falcons finished the regular season 8-9-1 overall and 4-2-1 in the MAC. The Eagles dropped their fourth straight match and fell to 6-12, 1-6.

"We felt like once we got the tying goal and got into overtime, then we were in great shape," Falcons' coach Mel Mahler said. "Championship teams find ways to win games, even when they are not playing their best, and we did that. Our guys never quit and we let our work ethic get the result."

Mahler said the game had been frustrating until Biggs' late goal. Contact between players was getting out of hand and the game seemed to be slipping away after the Eagles rebounded from an early deficit for a 2-1 lead.

Matt Lyons scored the game-winner, his second goal of the game, at 102:20 on what Mahler called a brilliant play.

Lyons fired a shot from 30 yards out that beat EMU goalkeeper George Tomasso by a wide margin.

Tomasso saved 11 of Bowling Green's 23 shots.

Lyons' first goal, at 20:44, was his first of the season. He took a cross from Dore and punched it in from close range.

"It was a great offensive effort from Matt," Mahler said. "Yesterday [Saturday] in practice, he was scoring all kinds of goals from everywhere. I think whatever he was doing in practice kind of carried over into the game."

Ty Fowler stopped seven of the Eagles' 13 shots. He was beaten at 49:52 by EMU's Chris King. With both teams in transition, an Eagles' cross ricocheted off of Fowler and King was in the box to finish the offensive.

The Eagles took the lead at 63:27 on a goal by midfielder Dan Trosper. Daniel Kitching was credited with an assist on the play.

"We didn't play our best soccer," Mahler said. "But our kids never quit. Over the last month, we've shown a lot of heart. Our guys are a little bit anxious to get to Illinois and prove we can compete for the MAC championship."

The Falcons will face Northern Illinois, Marshall or Buffalo, depending on other league results, in Friday's MAC tournament quarterfinals.

EMU will be either the seventh or eighth seed and will face Kentucky or Akron.

Women lose to Toledo

By PETE STELLA
The BG News

Despite playing one of the best games of the season, the BG women's soccer team lost a hard fought match to arch rival Toledo 2-1 in overtime Saturday morning.

The loss ends the Falcons 1999 season and keeps them from going to the Mid-American Conference postseason tournament for the second straight year. The loss drops the Falcons final record to 5-11-3 overall and 2-6-3 in the MAC.

The Rockets connected with the back of the net first, when freshman forward Corrie Hasenjager took a pass deflected right to her and netted the first of Toledo's five shots on goal past Falcon freshman goalie Erika Flanders. Flanders ended the day with three saves in 97 minutes of action.

Hasenjager's goal was the only scoring done by either team for the rest of the first half and for most of the second half. But Falcon sophomore Desiree Erb changed all of that with only three minutes remaining in regulation. With the Falcons pressuring the Toledo defense, Erb finished a Michelle Lisy shot, which hit the crossbar and got it past Rocket goalie Jen Hoffman. Erb's goal came at the 87:23 mark of the second half and was assisted by Lisy and freshman forward Susan Wallace.

"When I scored, I just thought we had a chance," Erb said. "I thought we had a chance to make up from some mistakes earlier in the game."

But in overtime, the Rockets proved to be too strong for the Brown and Orange. Toledo junior Odia Jahurally took a freshman Amy Back breakaway pass and scored the game winning goal at the 97:14 mark. "When I saw her (Jahurally) score, I just didn't want our season to be over," Erb said.

"This was a good game by both clubs," BG coach Tom Piccirillo said. "Jahurally had a decent shot and Flanders slipped going after it. This was one of the best efforts put forward by our team the whole season. It is just sad that it had to end this way."

The Falcons held a 18-17 shot advantage on the Rockets, including a 9-5 advantage on shots on goal. The match was also very physical, resulting in a total of 13 fouls between both teams, four yellow cards and an almost bench clearing brawl.

"Both teams played very tough," Piccirillo said. "We came out very strong and we had a no-lose attitude for the whole match. We just couldn't score on the several close opportunities that we had."

HOCKEY

the previous night's game, the Falcons took two early penalties. Doug Schueller took a two minute rest in the box after a roughing after the whistle call only :20 into the contest. Williams also received a two minute penalty for slashing 1:40 after face-off.

The Falcons scored first and often in the second period. The first goal in the period was an even strength goal by freshman Masters, his first collegiate goal, at 4:41. Mass and Fultz assisted on the goal.

The second period saw tempers flare as well. After Fairbanks took a shot on Masters after the whistle, a brawl ensued in the north end of the ice resulting in all five players for each team being sent to the penalty box.

B.J. Adams scored the game winning goal at 6:51 off an assist from Doug Schueller. After gaining a 5-2 lead the Falcon defense got a little careless in the third, allowing two Fairbanks goals.

"The defense just got a little more offensive minded and didn't keep all five guys in front of them," Powers said. "When the puck popped out, they were trapped."

Despite the win, the Falcon did not come out the same way they did on Friday.

"The way we played last night wasn't the way we played tonight," Adams said. "Just the way our whole game was tonight wasn't as sharp as it was last night."

Prior to this weekend the Falcons have been outscored by their opponents 15-9. This weekend BG outscored Fairbanks 13-6. The Falcons take on Miami Saturday in Oxford.

Jaguars dominate Bengals despite soreness

By JOE KAY
AP Sports Writer

CINCINNATI — Mark Brunell's side ached. Fred Taylor's legs cramped. Neither did much in the second half except watch from the sideline.

Against the Cincinnati Bengals, one painful half was more than enough.

Taylor, playing for the first time in four weeks because of a hamstring injury, rushed for 126 yards in the first half as the Jaguars rolled to a 41-10 victory Sunday.

After relying heavily on the NFL's top-ranked defense to carry them this far, the Jaguars (6-1) put it all together for the first time since a season-opening 41-3 win over San Francisco.

"This game was kind of personal for the offense," offensive tackle Leon Searcy said. "We have been overshadowed by the defense the past couple of weeks. We just wanted to gain some of that notoriety."

They came close to gaining a little piece of history.

Jacksonville's domination was so complete that the Bengals (1-7) needed a timeout and a last-second touchdown pass by Jeff Blake to avoid the worst defeat in franchise history.

Blake called a timeout with 6 seconds left, then lobbed a 15-yard touchdown pass as time ran out to avoid the record books. A 41-3 defeat would have been Cincinnati's worst ever.

FROM THE WIRE

Vikings 23, Broncos 20

DENVER (AP) — Cris Carter and Leroy Hoard tore off huge gains Sunday, and the Vikings profited from critical mistakes by the Broncos in a 23-20 victory Sunday.

Gary Anderson's 23-yard field goal with one second left won it. Previously quiet, Randy Moss had a 23-yard reception, then caught a ball tipped by cornerback Ray Crockett — who was torched all day — to convert a third-and-10 on the winning drive.

Colts 34, Cowboys 24

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Deion Sanders, who set up one Dallas touchdown with a 76-yard punt return and made a big TD-saving tackle, let Marvin Harrison get behind him for a 40-yard touchdown reception on the first play of the fourth quarter, and the Indianapolis Colts held on for a 34-24 victory on Sunday.

Dolphins 16, Raiders 9

OAKLAND, Calif. (AP) — Miami's defense held an opponent without a touchdown for the second straight week, shutting down the NFL's top rushing attack in a 16-9 win over the Oakland Raiders on Sunday.

Patriots 27, Cardinals 3

TEMPE, Ariz. (AP) — Drew Bledsoe matched his career high with four touchdown passes, two to Shawn Jefferson, as New England beat the Arizona Cardinals 27-3 Sunday to improve to 6-2, the Patriots' best start since 1980.

Driver's death overshadows competitive race

FONTANA, Calif. (AP) — A stirring race and fight for the CART championship were quickly forgotten amid tears Sunday when race winner Adrian Fernandez and new series champion Juan Montoya were told that fellow driver Greg Moore was dead.

Moore, a 24-year-old Canadian and one of the budding stars of the Champ Car series, died from massive head and internal injuries after his car went off the track at more than 220 mph and slammed into a concrete retaining wall.
